

ABSTRACT

A simple computer comprising a group of individual sub-circuits that can be plugged together in several ways to form an operating computer. The invention is used to teach students the basic components of a computer and to demonstrate how each sub-system works and its interrelationship with the other sub-systems. The invention is designed so that it can be easily assembled and disassembled and the components are readily visible to the students.